What is High Performance Mindset Coaching?

High Performance Mindset at Work (HPMW) coaching is a type of solution-focused, cognitive-behavioural coaching that incorporates best learning and development practices drawn from the fields of positive psychology and organisational behaviour, emotional intelligence, brain science, rational effectiveness training, resilience and mindset development.

HPMW coaching entails supporting individuals to further develop elements of their high performance mindset and applying the high performance mindset to tough situations. As part of the foundational elements of the high performance mindset and depending on the individual's profile, the focus of HPMW coaching is on strengthening the individual's core commitments to success, others and self. This involves the individual putting into practice different work-related beliefs (e.g. high frustration tolerance, optimism, empathy, respect, self-acceptance, authenticity) that support each of the commitments. Additionally, HPMW coaching involves action planning of ways the individual responds to tough work situations including the identification of ways to overcome work performance blockers and the use of one or more behavioural strengths to tackle tough situations.

The flow and sequence of coaching can best be described using the four-step, Grape Model.

- Step 1: Goals
- Step 2: Reflection
- Step 3: Action Planning
- Step 4: Evaluation
